Naming Trauma and Practicing Resilient Love
To be black and conscious in America is to be in a constant state of rage.

WHAT ARE YOUR TRIGGERS?

Dealing With Historical Racial Trauma

For some people, certain stimuli (e.g., pictures, sounds, movements) may cause feelings of anxiety, fear, dread, and other unpleasant emotional responses. For the Black community specifically, reliving events of racial violence may trigger generations of historical racial trauma. It is important for each of us to recognize our own triggers so that we may take steps to address any negative physical and emotional responses.

- Check in with yourself. You are in a safe space and are in control.
- Recognize that you are having an emotional reaction as soon as it begins to appear in your body.
- Consider whether the emotion is related to fear, anger, or sadness. See if you can determine what triggered the emotion.
- Know that your feelings are valid, and that you have the power to choose how you react.
